SMACKOUT
Radio Program Log 1931 to 1935

Marian and Jim Jordan initiated their radio acting career in Chicago in 1926 as the O'Henry Twins. This music program was followed by other shows, The Air Scouts and The Smith Family, which were broadcast over independent stations. Then, in early 1931, The Smith Family was broadcast by CBS and soon after by NBC. All this time the Jordans were also in vaudeville and were using radio to advertise their stage shows (which realized a much more favorable financial return).

SMACKOUT was created by Don Quinn who became their long-time partner/writer. This program premiered at 6:00 pm on Monday, March 2, 1931 over WMAQ which was owned by CBS at the time. Soon after, NBC purchased WMAQ and assumed operations on November 1, 1931.

Meanwhile, Don Quinn wrote and the Jordans performed song and comedy on this fifteen minute program that generally played three to five times a week, Monday through Saturday. During the first two years SMACKOUT was a balance of comedy and song, vaudeville style, while the last two years were predominantly comedy. Jim played a bragging grocery store owner, Luke Grey, who was always just "smack out" of everything. Marian was heard as his wife, Mirandy; she played piano accompaniment for the many musical numbers heard on the show, and began working with her little girl voice that eventually became the favorite "Teeny" of so many Fibber McGee and Molly listeners.

According to a letter from Jim Jordan, over the four and one-half years of SMACKOUT the program was sustained — there were no sponsors. Because of this, SMACKOUT was preempted many times by special programming and by sports casts. When the Jordans opened their Fibber McGee and Molly program on April 16, 1935, they continued with SMACKOUT for four more months until the final SMACKOUT broadcast, number 932, on Saturday, August 3, 1935.
